

http://www.google.com/imgres?imgrefurl=http%3A%2F%2Farthistory.about.com%2Fod%2Feducator_parent_resources%2Ffig%2Fpicturing_america%2Fpa_neh_19.htm&tbnid=6bVNUclUKwJHsM:&docid=8HtXgiQdJKu2TM&h=942&w=1500

http://mrjgoyeneche.files.wordpress.com/2011/05/ball_turret_gunner.jpg

<http://www.firearmstalk.com/images/3/9/0/8/3/lower-ball-turret-2009.jpg>

Old South Boston Aquarium

The Aquarium at Marine Park was opened in 1912. Built by the City of Boston from income derived from the Parkman Fund, it was a popular and exciting place to visit for children and adults alike. These visitors are approaching the stucco building, whose cupola is surmounted by a fish weather vane.

The interior of the South Boston Aquarium, showing the huge tanks Robert Lowell viewed as a child. Despite its popularity, the aquarium was demolished in the 1950s. (Courtesy SBHS.)

Source: Anthony Mitchell Sammarco, Images of America: South Boston, p. 109. Arcadia Publishing: Dover, New Hampshire, 1996.

http://college.holycross.edu/faculty/sluria/old_sb_aquarium.htm